WASHINGTON LETTER.

The Monument-Corcoran's Art Gallery-Statue of Napoleon-Mrs. Livermore-The Inauguration-Hancock, Sheridan, Stc. WASHINGTON, D. C., March 8 -I have seen and heard so much since my last letter that I can only give a hasty and imperfect description.

I did not go to the monument on the 21st., as the weather was fearfully cold, but at 1 o'clock I stationed myself in the gallery of the House to await the arrival of those who had been in attendance at the dedicatory ceremonies. I was in time to get a good seat, but many who came in later had to stand. At about 2:30 they came pouring in-President Arthur and his Cabinet (and really Arthur is a fine-looking old gentleman), the foreign ministers. and many other notable people. W. W. Corcoran, founder of the Corcoran Art Gallery, and George Bancroft, the historian. came in together, and these two men, with their snow-white hair and slow step, drew forth more loud and extended applause than any others. The foreign Ministers were in court dress, and I am told they very rarely appear so except on Inauguration Days. The Chinese and Japanese representatives of course wore the gayest and most striking costumes, and the contrast between these dried-up looking men and our own large, well developed Americans was most marked. Speaker Carlisle occupied his usual seat, and the President of the Senate, Mr. Edmunds, sat at his right as Chairman of the meeting. Mr. Edmunds were a little round black cap, I don't know why, which made him look very odd. Mr. Carlisle is rather a distingue-looking man. Three Episcopal clergymen in long white robes sat in front of and below the Speaker; and the rector from Mount Vernon made the openit g prayer. The reason, I presume, for selecting Episcepalian divines was that George Washington was himself a member of that church, but why three should have been necessary I could not understand. After the prayer Mr. Edmunds announced that Hon. John D. Long, of Massachusetts, would now read the oration of Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, who was unable to be present. Prolonged cheers greeted ex Governor Long as he arose. He is, a fine looking man in the prime of life, with a voice so clear and strong that every word was easily heard. It took him about an hour to read the address, and he undoubtedly did it better than Mr. Winthrop himself could have done. But it seemed a great pity that Mr. Winthrop could not be present at least, for he is, as he stated in the oration, a sort of connecting link between Weshington and this generation, having received his commission as Speaker the House from John Quincy Adams, who, years before, received his from President Washington himself. Mr. Winthrop's address was in every respect perfectly admirable, and the contrast between it and that of Mr. Daniel, of Virginia, which followed, was most marked. In this case Massachusetts left Virginia very

On the following Friday I visited the Corcoran Art Gallery, where I saw some magnificent copies of the Greek Slave, Venus of Milo, Apollo, etc; but what attracted me most was a life-size statue of Napoleon, which is considered one of the greatest sculptural works of modern times. He is seated in a chair supported by a pillow, while his dressing gown, partly open, shows his massive but wasted chest. In one hand he nervously clutches a map of "Europe of 1814." The earnest gaze of the eyes, the classic brow, the thin nostrils and compressed lips show the indomitable spirit of the conqueror, who, however, is about to yield to the last conqueror death. The subect is pathetic, and is certainly executed with power.

far in the rear, the effort of Mr. Daniel being highly rhetorical and sephomorical in its character.

On Sunday night I had the pleasure of bearing Mrs. Mary A. Livermore preach in All Souls (Unitarian) Church. Her discourse was admirable and admirably spoken. But it seemed to me that she was not exactly suited for the ministry. She is too purely intellectual, if this was a sample of her preaching. There was not sentiment and emotion enough to reach the hearts and stir the receives of her audience. But she is considered as perhaps the most gifted among the women who are now agitating the question of their rights, and is doing an excellent work as one of the few really popular lecturers.

At All Souls Church I was introduced to Senator Hoar, of Massachusetts, and was charmed by his handsome features, beauti- | duke gave out to the reporters at Jefferson fut complexion and innocent look. I am teld that he is very irascible in temper and given to barsh and severe words, but I saw | man and keeper of keno rooms in this city, nothing in his face but "sweetness and alleging that in 1875 he paid money for the

Monday morning I went with some friends we looked up, and the sensation was frighttui, for the whole massive structure seemed to be tumbling over on us. The effect was startling, and was caused by the motion of the clouds. We found quite a crowd waiting their turn, although we went early in wir dows at the world below. It was appearance of every object in sight The men and women near the Monument below looked like grasshoppers or lilliputs as they tripped to and fro. The legs of the men seemed about as large as pipe-stems. Humanity from this height was most ridicalously contemptible; and even the Capital with its great dome was dwarfed and spolled conception of the effect of mere altitude in diminishing all objects below. Our journey up and down the Monument was in every way exciting and gratifying, and will always he one of the pleasant memories of this visit to Washington.

I was indebted to the kindness of Senator Voorhees for a ticket to the Senate gallery on the 4th, and very fortunately I secured a seat nearly opposite where Mr. Arthur and Mr. Cleveland sat, so that I had a good opportunity for drawing comparisons, which were in favor of Mr. Cleveland every time. I am very happy to say that Cleveland's pictures do not begin to do him justice; he is quite bald and there is a kindly expression on his face that is not seen in the photo-graphs. He is large and dignified in his hearing; his head is splendid, and in looking at him one can not fail to be impressed with the feeling that there is great power in the

Mr. Hendricks' remarks on taking the cath as Vice President were brief, and we then repaired to the platform erected in front of the Capitol to hear the inmanity which was well worth a journey to Washington. President Arthur came to the front with Cleveland, but a little in advance heartily. In a moment Cleveland stepped forward before the gaze of the people, and their cheering was perfectly indescribable. A chorus of 50,000 to 75,000 voices sent up from the densely packed masses in front and to the right and left was a novelty only possible to be appreciated by those who heard it from the platform. The crowd altogether exceeded in numbers that of any previous insuguration, and it was the general remark that so perfectly packed a mass of people have never been witnessed on any occasion in Washington. Cleveland's attitude was perfectly self-poised, and every sentence he uttered and every lineament of his face clearly indicated courage and strength of

But before I close I want to say a word about General Hancock. He and General Sheridan came into the Senate Chamber together, and stood shaking hands with the many men who pressed forward to see them. Hancock is certainly the handsomest old gentleman I ever saw. His hair is white, and he wears only a monstasche; he is magnificent in his proportions. and his General's uniform only made him more conspicuous. Sheridan is a most contemptible looking little man, short and thick-set, with a face too red, certainly, for good looks. The people in the galleries as soon as they caught sight of the generals were wild with enthusiasm, and from the cries of "Hancock," and the remarks that were made, it was easy to tell which of the two was the attraction.

It took four hours for the procession to pass a given point, and every one who witnessed it all must have been exhausted; but it was very fine. There were 7,500 in the Fennsylvania troops, and they did march beautifully. Next to Pennsylvania, I be-lieve New York was more largely represented than any other State. Tammany was there, and Irving Hall, but of course all the details have been printed in your paper, and as this, my last letter, is already long, I will add nothing more.

GRACE GIDDINGS JULIAN. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

Its Report on Consumption and Distribution of the Corn and Wheat Crops.

WASHINGTON, March 10 .- The report of the consumption and distribution of corn and wheat from the statistical returns from the Department of Agriculture shows that 3734 per cent, of the last crop of corn remains in the farmers' hands, against 33 per cent. on another woman and wanted to get his wife the 1st of March, 1884. The supply in farmers' hand last March, 1884, was 512,000,-000 bushels. The remainder now is about

Stock in the Middle States is 290,000 000, against 220,000,000 in last March. In the South the proportion is the same as last year, 416 per cent., but the quantity is 145,000,000 bushels against 138,000,000. The proportion in the West is 36.7 instead of 30.7, and the quantity amounts to 499,000,000 bushels, or 144,000 bushels more than the stock of last March. Two years ago the stock remaining at the same date was 587,000,000 bushels, or 36.3 per cent. of the crop of 1,617,060,000. The amount shipped is a few millions less than last year.

Exports equal 28 000,000 bushels, against 32,000,000 at the same date in 1884, and the commercial receipts at western markets are a'so less, a full eastern crop reducing slightly the demand, notwithstanding the reduction

The proportion of merchantable corn is very large, 87 per cent., against an average of 80 per cent. for a period of years, and 60 per cent for last year. Wheat reported in farmers' hands is about 33 per cent. of the crop, or 169,000,000 bushels, or 50,000,000 bushels more than the stock of last March, when the crop was less by 92,000,000 bushels.

There has been a slightly freer use of wheat for bread, and a little of poorer quality will be fed to stock. The stock on March 1, 1883, was 285 per cent of the previous crop, or 143,000,000 bushels; that on March 1, 1882, was 98,000,000 bushels. The quality is reported above the average in every Western State, except Illinois and Missouri, and in nearly all the Atlantic and Gulf Coast

The Marmaduke and Rainwater Quarrel. Sr. Louis, March 10.-The personal political controversy which has raged with more or less animosity for some time past between Governor Marmaduke, of this State, and Major C. C. The Legislature, which is to elect a Senator from New Hampshire, will not meet until June next, and the debate turned upon the point whether, in this emergency, the Governor had the right to appoint Blair to fill the vacancy, and whether a vacancy had really occurred which the Executive could provide for. Nothing of particular interest was developed in the debate except the point made by Mr. Ingalis, that the question at issue had a significance bearing upon the Senatorial vacancies in Illinois and Oregon.

After further debate the resolution was agreed to by yeas 36, nays 20. The only departure from a division upon party lines was in the case of Mr. Jones, of Florida, who voted in the affirmative with the Republi-

Candidates for Lafayette Postoffice.

Special to the Sentines. LAPAYETTE, Ind , March 10,-The following are the persons spoken of in connection with our Postoffice: John C. Doblebower, editor and proprieto of the Daily Dispatch. John B. Ruger, baker and confectioner, is also a candidate. Another is Dr. William Walker, who is also talked of as the next Democratic candidate for Mayor. Our present Mayor, Hon. F. E. D. McGinley, thinks he ought to have it. Colonel John S. Williams, editor of the Sunday Times, has his eye on the Postoffice so it is rumored, but, according to the dispatches received from Washington a few days ago, it seems as if John's ambition is a higher one. He is an applicant for the position of Second Assistant Postmaster General, and should be secure the appointment the Government will find him a worthy and able official. Some people think Colonel Williams will get left, and would just as soon take the Postoffice as not, for a bird in the hand is better than two in the bush. The chances of the aforesaid candidates are about equal. but the general sentiment of the populace is in favor of "Deacon Dobelbower," who, it is said, deserves it best. "Let the best man win," is the people's motto.

A Bloody Wife Murder. FORT SMITH, Ark., March 10 .- A bloody murder occurred at Scullyville, Choctaw Nation, yesterday morning. Joseph Jackson entered the house where his wife was washing dishes and shot her twice in the breast with a double barreled shot gun, killing her instantly. Jackson immediately shouldered his gun and walked three miles after a woman to attend his wife, whom he said was very ill. On reaching the house where his wife lay dead Jackson appeared startled and reported that his wife had been murdered during his absence. Suspicion pointed so plainly toward him as her murderer that he was arrested and brought to Forth Smith for trial. Jackson recently became enamered of out of the way, hence the motive for the

Double Murder.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 10 .- News has reached this city of a desperate affair at Bonds Mill, Va. On Saturday, February 28, Charles Henson and Martha Reynonds were married. A rejected suitor of the girl named "Bud" Mitchell swore vengeance. Sunday night at the parties were at church. At the close of the service Henson and his wife started off alone. Not reaching home, a search was made Monday morning, and both were found dead in a lonely spot. The flesh was cut in long slices from the woman's face and one hand was chopped off. Henson's head was battered into a shapeless mass. A search was made for Mitchell, but he was not found at last account. He will be lynched if he is.
